Abstract

GoodVibes Pro Travel and Tours (GV) is a travel and tour agency that offers unique, off-the-beaten-path, and a wide variety of services. They serve their clients with precision and care, ensuring a smooth and enjoyable travel experience. GV currently has an outdated website that prevents its customers from gaining more details about their company and its services. While aesthetically pleasing, it suffers from a high bounce rate and low engagement, indicating that potential customers are not fully grasping the unique value proposition or finding it easy to navigate the booking process. This directly impacts their growth and ability to reach a wider audience of adventure seekers.

Purpose of the Report: “This report documents how our team applied the Design Thinking process to identify, define, and develop a solution to a problem faced by GoodVibes Pro Travel and Tours.”

This report will also explore the five phases of the Design Thinking process: Empathize, Define, Ideate, Prototype, and Test. The group will describe how they went about each stage, emphasising the strategies and resources they employed. Comprehensive research findings on user behaviour and pain points, a well-defined problem statement, a variety of creative solutions produced through ideation, and a detailed plan for prototyping and testing the suggested website improvements to increase user engagement and conversion rates for GoodVibes Pro Travel and Tours are among the anticipated results detailed in this report.

Problem Alignment

Research Question: "How does the lack of an official website of GoodVibes Travels and Tours affect client experience and business credibility?"

This research question addresses the client's core issue by focusing on difficulties the users face when accessing essential information, such as booking dates, tour schedules, package rates, available destinations, and the company's contact details for more inquiries. Without a centralized and accessible platform, customers may struggle to inquire, book, or trust the service, potentially affecting the business's credibility and overall customer satisfaction.

Research Instrument and Methodology

The group conducted one (1) client interview to gain direct insights into their experiences, challenges, and perspectives regarding their core issue of lacking an official website. This session was conducted online via Google Meet and was guided by a prepared set of open-ended questions, and was documented through screen recording with the interviewee's consent.

This approach helps the group to better understand the client's needs and expectations from their point of view. Refer to the appendix for the complete question and answer (see Figure 4).

Interview Questions:

Can you briefly tell us what GoodVibes Travels and Tours does?

1. What's the story behind the name "Good Vibes"?
2. How long have you been operating?
3. What makes your business stand out from other travel/tour companies?
4. Who is your target customer?
5. What are your current goals for the business?
6. Based on how your business operates, how would you describe it:
7. How do most of your customers find you? (e.g., Facebook, referrals, ads)
8. How do customers usually inquire or book your services—through chat, forms, or something else?
9. Do you think your current platforms (e.g., Facebook, IG) are enough, or do you see the need for a more updated website?
10. What do you think about your current website? Do you think it's enough as it is, or does it need improvement?
11. What information do clients usually ask for when they inquire?
12. Are there times you feel details are missed during customer inquiries?
13. How do you handle bookings and last-minute changes, or cancellations?
14. Where do your clients usually send their feedback?
15. What feedback have you received from clients about your current booking or inquiry process?
16. What challenges do you face when it comes to promoting or advertising your services?
17. If you had a new and fully updated website, what features or info would you want on it?
18. In your opinion, what areas of your business need the most improvement?

Summary of Key Findings

Theme	Client Response
No Official Website	The interviewee clarified that the outdated website appearing upon searching online has been out of work for a while now, and that GV does not currently have an official website and relies on social media for marketing and communication.
Limited Online Presence and Marketing	The interviewee acknowledges that their current online presence is not enough and that their marketing efforts are limited, which affects their ability to reach a wider audience and build credibility.
Variety of Services Not Showcased	The business offers a range of services such as tour packages, team-building events, charity activities, and many more. However, these services are not well-presented or easily accessible online, making it difficult for potential customers to fully understand the scope of their services.

II. Define Phase

The group was surprised to learn that GV does not have a functional website despite being active on social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok. While their social media marketing is strong and helps attract clients, their company lacks a working website. A website that has features to offer their services, online booking, and builds trust through detailed company information.

The data was gathered via an interview with Mrs. Bernadette, GV's owner. The interview focused on understanding the company's operations, social media presence, and its growth challenges.

Mrs. Bernadette, GV's owner, acknowledged the importance of having a website not just as a marketing tool, but also to support the booking system, share customer reviews, and build credibility by showcasing their awards and charity works.

Problem Statement

GoodVibes Pro Travel and Tours needs a website to improve marketing reach and streamline client translation, as relying on social media limits their visibility and efficiency. A website will make booking and service information much more accessible for customers while helping the business manage operations more effectively.

III. Ideation Phase

The group went through thorough brainstorming to analyze the system of GV and to determine the problems and challenges it is facing. The team held face-to-face meetings during class and as well as meetings through online calls, about the struggles of the business in terms of online marketing. They were able to stumbled upon an outdated website of the business upon searching; however, this website is no longer being used as it is a very old one that hasn't been updated for years. They then discussed the challenges the business has and came up with a solution, which is to develop a website for GV. This was decided due to the business's lack of professional atmosphere when it comes to their exposure in the online platform, as having a website can boost their online presence to also expand the business scope of customers. A website is a way to help a business build a stable brand awareness to reach customers. It showcases the business's products and services and creates awareness about them. It is also easy to maintain and develop compared to physical stores, as it is easier to set up a website and it costs less as well. Through a website, the business can also announce their new products, service launches, and host sales, or even share relevant content that is beneficial to the customers. It is a full package instead of campaigning using social media platforms.

GV's existing website is our lowest priority since it is outdated and hasn't been used and updated for years, ever since the business was established. It is almost treated as non-existent by the owners themselves, as most of the current staff do not know of its existence. Their highest priority is to develop a new website for the business. This will be made according to the current image of the business using its latest logo, color palette, and updated information.

The existence of a new website will be an improvement to the business professional atmosphere, and it can enhance its legitimacy and build credibility. It can help attract more customers due to its online exposure, and it can also bring expansion to the business's customer service, as this website will act as a way for customers to have access to the business's services inside or even outside its business hours.

Key Features:

- Increases the company's credibility.
- Attracts more customers
- Expansion to customer service
- Easy access to the company's basic and important information
- Promotes the company to a bigger scope.
- Convenience to the GV coordinator and their clients.

The group's implementation of a website for GV can bring a wide range of advantages to the company, from the enhancement of the business's validity to being a place to display the business's credentials to avoid skepticism. The website can also improve the trustworthiness between the customers and the business, as it puts out important information for customers to see. It is a way to strengthen the business, to build a positive reputation amongst its customers, and to create a comfortable service environment.

IV. Prototype Phase

The group will use Figma as the primary platform to design the prototype website. Once the design is complete, they will publish the prototype with Figma Sites to allow the clients to view and interact with the website, providing a clear visual representation of how the final, fully functional website will look and operate.

V. Testing Phase

Once the website prototype has been developed, it will undergo a beta testing procedure that will be conducted by the developers themselves to ensure the availability of the prototype. Once the group has checked for further testing and adjustments, they would ask their client to inspect the website, as their input is vital in developing the prototype. Making sure that every element of the website aligns with their vision, marketing objectives, and overall campaign goals. Once the client has approved the prototype, the group will ask some GV Staff to test the website, to gather different perspectives on feedback, and to test if the website is functioning. The group will also let other teams explore and test if the website can be navigated through each section.

The group hopes to gather more feedback from their client, such as what needs to be improved, and whether the website's design and content are reflecting the brand’s identity. Are they clear, informative, and engaging, or are there any adjustments that need to be made? We also hope to gather feedback about the website’s usability and accessibility to the target audience. As well as whether the website effectively communicates the unique selling proposition of the company, does the website evoke a sense of excitement or desire to travel? By exploring the website, did they find the content and necessary details clear and easy to understand?

Conclusion

Our research revealed that GV does not currently have an official website. Their online presence, although great, is limited to platforms like Facebook, Instagram and TikTok, where clients struggle to find essential information related to services, the booking process, and the company's profile. The absence of a centralized platform weakens their credibility.

To address this, our group proposes the development of a new responsive website tailored to GV's brand and service.

The website will:

- Centralizes all service information, such as tour packages, team building, charity events, and custom itineraries.
- Integrates an up-to-date booking system, with real-time availability and automated confirmation.
- Showcases awards won, client reviews, and past charity work to build trust with the customers, as strongly requested by the client.
- And lastly, reflects the refreshed new look of the brand through updated visuals and color palettes.

For the client, GoodVibes Pro Travel and Tours, the new and improved website will modernize nearly every aspect of day-to-day operations. Clients' questions will route through a single logical channel, booking workflows will shed unnecessary and tedious steps, and the odds of passing along out-of-date fare or schedule data will shrink to almost zero. Bringing everything together in one online space should help increase bookings and show travellers that the company is legitimate.

As for the travelers, this benefits those who value a vacation that gets planned without headaches or those who need service specs in a heartbeat, will find the new platform much to their liking. Updated FAQs, easy-to-use filters, and real-time customer reviews. Keeping things ‘good vibes’.

Next Steps:

1. Prototype Refinement (Week 8-9)
    - Update wireframes in Figma, incorporate the current brand logo, color palettes, images, and information in content placeholder.
    - Perform a quality check for responsiveness.
2. Client Walk Through(Week 9-10)
    - Conduct a live demonstration with Ms. Bernadette.
    - Gather feedback on branding accuracy and feature set.
    - Address any urgent modifications as requested.
3. Testing And Finalization(Week 11-13)
    - Run task-based assessments such as completing a booking, locating contact information, or finding a package.
    - Resolve issues with usability, including navigation, call-to-action buttons, and the speed of the website.
    - Finalize all relevant documents, such as the final report paper and a guide paper for GV.

Anticipated Challenges:

- Scheduling conflict, managing a group of six individuals who have varying class schedules and personal responsibilities, may delay progress.
- Design alignment, The team may take longer to pick some elements, due to their having different aesthetic and tastes.

By sticking to this roadmap, along with continuous integration of feedback, the group will create a website that promotes GV’s digital presence and simultaneously fosters a foundation for sustainable growth and an unforgettable travel experience.

Interview with Mrs. Bern, Owner of Good vibes travel and tours

1. Can you briefly tell us what GoodVibes Travels and Tours does?
   - GoodVibes Travels and Tours is a travel and tour company that offers a wide variety of services. They serve their clients with precision and care, ensuring a smooth and enjoyable travel experience.

2. What's the story behind the name "Good Vibes"?
   - Came from Sir RJ, more on having fun, from a small to a growing company.

3. How long have you been operating?
   - 2010

4. What makes your business stand out from other travel/tour companies?

- Services alone, they cater to different clients, and they personalize their travel and tour. Base sa mga wants ng clients nila.
- TEAM: Professionalism of GV sa mga events and tours, they are not just coordinators

5. Who is your target customer
   - Everyone is welcome.

6. What are your current goals for the business?
   - Our goal is to expand more as a company and for people to know us.

7. Based on how your business operates, how would you describe it?
   - Medium Enterprise

8. How do most of your customers find you? (e.g., Facebook, referrals, ads)
   - Mostly Facebook and word of mouth.

9. How do customers usually inquire or book your services—through chat, forms, or something else?
   - Mostly through Facebook, their clients message them on Facebook, and it has an automated response so they can fillout a form or just inquire.
   - But VIPs have direct contact with them.

10. Do you think your current platforms (e.g., Facebook, IG) are enough, or do you see the need for a more updated website?
    - GV's current online presence is not enough since they recently began to be more active, especially on Facebook. A website will be a great help since it can help with direct booking. This way, customers wouldn’t have to wait for someone to respond to their inquiries, streamlining communication and service delivery.

11. What do you think about your current website? Do you think it's enough as it is, or does it need improvement?
    - They currently do not have a website.

12. What information do clients usually ask for when they inquire?
    - They offer a range of travel and tour services, often catering to clients who book for large groups, such as team building, company outings, and other group events.

13. Are there times you feel details are missed during customer inquiries?
    - No, because GV and the GV team are very accommodating and can even handle last-minute changes or requests.

14. How do you handle bookings and last-minute changes, or cancellations?

    Cancellation: Clients sign a contract, which includes terms and conditions regarding cancellations. While cancellations are generally not allowed due to the agreement, GV handles these situations professionally. The owners are generous and understanding—they often offer alternative solutions such as rescheduling or adjusting the booking when possible.

    Last-minute changes: Again, the GV team is very accommodating. In fact, one of their recent clients—a pilgrimage group—requested last-minute changes, including an additional vehicle and a tarpaulin, which the team was able to provide without issue.

15. Where do your clients usually send their feedback?
    - Clients usually give feedback through Facebook, which GV then shares on their page. However, most feedback is given directly—either in person, where clients express their appreciation to Sir RJ and Ma'am Bern, or through private messages on Facebook. Sometimes, feedback is also sent via group chats created by GV, allowing clients to thank the entire GV team personally

16. What feedback have you received from clients about your current booking or inquiry process?
    - One word: Commendable. Clients often receive compliments primarily because of the GV team. They are praised for their kindness, from the drivers to the coordinators. The entire experience is often described as hassle-free and smooth, with clients saying that GV consistently goes above and beyond expectations.

17. What challenges do you face when it comes to promoting or advertising your services?
    - I think our marketing we have right now is limited. We have countless offers from influencers, content creators and vloggers. In the future maybe, we can expand to those kinds of marketing approche so we can have more reach to people.

18. If you had a new and fully updated website, what features or info would you want on it?

    As per Mrs. Bern request:
    - Add charity works
    - How they require for quotation
    - Previous bookings
    - Things na kailangan for company profile
    - Booking

19. In your opinion, what areas of your business need the most improvement?
    - Marketing. Currently, their marketing efforts are quite limited, and they recognize the need to expand their reach. With several content creators and vloggers already showing interest and reaching out, GV plans to level up their marketing strategy in the near future to connect with a wider audience and attract more clients.
